Excerpt: .were sentenced, and the absence of those facilities for cheap and expeditious travelling to other states, which now enable the felon, on his liberation, to pursue his career where he is unknown. It should also be observed that the reconvictions recorded at an American penitentiary, do not include the recommitment of its discharged prisoners to any other prison, even where such facts are known. Unless, therefore, the prisoner returns to the identical prison from which he was discharged, it is assumed that he has abstained from crime, although the case may be that, within a week of his liberation, he was committed to the penitentiary of a neighbouring state, no inquiry on that head being instituted. Under these circumstances, nothing can be more calculated to mislead, than such a test of the effects of imprisonment. The Legislature has placed the general supervision of the...
