Urea results from the synthesis in the liver of ammonia and the amino acids, basically, according to Hofmeister (8) an oxidative process. Failure in the ureaforming function, therefore, indicates a condition of suboxidation. Other investigators state that proteid metabolism involves other processes such as hydrolysis and dehydration, and hold that the theory of deficient oxidation contains only a part of the truth. Ewing and Wolf (10) prefer to call this failure to remove the amino group and convert it into urea and water deficient desamidation. Low urea may result from a nonnitrogenous diet and in itself does not indicate deficient metabolic capacity. It must be associated with an increased percentage of ammonia or rest nitrogen or in both in order that no doubt of the failure of the synthesizing process may...

Reviews

A fresh e book with a brand new point of view. It is definitely simplistic but surprises in the fifty percent of your ebook. Its been designed in an extremely basic way and is particularly just soon after i finished reading this ebook where in fact altered me, change the way i really believe.
