CHAPTER XII The Principles And Internal Administration Of Akbar The success of the three branches of the government, and the fulfilment of the wishes of the subject, writes the author of the Ain-i-Akbari, whether great or small, depend upon the manner in which a king spends his time. Tried by this test, the cause of the success of Akbar as a man and as a ruler can be logically traced. Not only was he methodical, but there ran through his method a most earnest desire to think and do what was right in itself and conducive to the great aim of his life, /the building of an edifice which, rooted in the hearts of people, would be independent of the personality of the ruler. Before I attempt to state in detail the means he adopted to attain this end, I propose to say...
