Excerpt: . . . resulted in about 348 million of lower salary and benefit costs for over 11, 000 fewer support staff than planned. The lower support workload also reduced infrastructure costs for temporary office space rental, equipment and supply costs, and contractual services that resulted in further available balances of 167 million. However, these available balances were partially offset by about 100 million of higher salary and benefit costs than planned for enumerators, including a higher workload for unanticipated recounts. The U. S. Census Bureau prepared its fiscal year 2000 plan for the 2000 Budget Variances by decennial census in eight frameworks of effort as shown in table 2.
