Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Political Questions of the Day: An Address Delivered at Broadway Hall, Oakland, December 24th, 1873 Among the weaknesses of human nature to which all men are subject, and which all wise men deplore, is that of procrastination. The most trivial and commonplace affairs are allowed to push aside those serious matters that should be the rule of conduct and guide of life. Of the duties thus deferred, is that of attending to public affairs and of investigating those things which it is everybody's business to act upon, but which are seldom duly considered and examined till the time for action is close at hand. Then it is when impartial investigation is impossible, when in the heat and excitement of a political canvass the judgment is warped and blinded by partisan prejudice, that most people give any serious attention to the affairs of State; and as they are by this time no longer open to argument or conviction, they follow their old-time leaders in their efforts to glorify their party and justify themselves in adhering to dead issues and party distinctions. The platoons and cohorts of party very seldom change front after the battle has begun, and if we look through the political history of our own times, we may notice that the thoughts of men have crystallized into convictions when neither canvassing nor stump-speaking were availed of to befog the intellect or excite the passions. Revolutions, though sudden in appearance, are years in their growth. It took not only decades and generations, but centuries of tyranny over submission, of bigotry over credulity, of knowledge over ignorance, of luxury in the midst of want,...
